Unita told to come clean Savimbi's men attack Kuito

LUANDA: The Angolan government has called for three-party talks to "clarify ambiguities and contradictions" in Unita's acceptance of the Angolan peace pact and last year's elections results.

The meeting should be attended by UN special representative Alioune Blondin Beye, and envoys from Portugal, the United States, Russia and Unita, an official statement issued here said.

The UN's special envoy to Angola said that "discreet" talks were under way aimed at resuming peace negotiations between the government and Jonas Savimbi's movement.

The meeting is to "clarify ambiguities and contradictions in the Unita statement" and become a "serious basis for a resumption of negotiations between the government and Unita," the government said on Saturday.

President Eduardo dos Santos on Friday ordered government forces to step up their actions against Unita, dismissing a ceasefire declared unilaterally by Unita on September 20 as "non-existent."

He said the Unita proposals, including its acceptance of the September 1992 election results, were intended only to play for time.

The government said Unita had so far failed to make clear its stand on a withdrawal of its troops from the re-

A devilish Sunday!

A STOLEN telephone pole brought the NBC's Oshiwambo services to an abrupt and ungodly halt yesterday.

The three-hour stoppage sparked far from Christian feelings in the breasts of most of the devout in the North and elsewhere who like to listen to hymns on Sunday mornings. Devilish anger was rife.

The service stopped at 07h00 and only started again at about 10h00.

At 13h00 an announcer apologised, telling listeners that a telephone pole which had been stolen near Okatope, between Ondangwa and Oshivelo, had caused the breakdown.

The announcer said it was the third time this year that telephone poles had been stolen in Owambo.

Apart from the Oshiwambo services, electronic banking facilities, such as BOB and AutoBank, were also out of order in Owambo during the same period.

Show heads for record

as organisers turn on magic

THE SECOND best attendance ever, brisk business and a massive line-up of entertainment to suit every taste. That was last week's Windhoek show, and the organisers now promise that next year it will be even bigger and better.

Show attendance, as measured by the tickets sold at the gate, came within 111 of beating the record set in 1983. After a crowd of 11 999 passed the gates on the last day, Friday, the total for the week was 62 244, more than 7 400 better than last year.

A quick survey of traders showed all but one delighted with the amount of business they had done. All the traders questioned said they would like to come back again - showing the show society had hit the magic formula for business.

Even the security at the show won high praise, with most traders spoken to claiming they were very satisfied and it surpassed security at all or most South African shows.

But two traders complained they were gratuitously beaten and some said some customers were arrogant or unwelcoming to South Africans who make up a proportion of show exhibitors.

Show society president Ulli Pack said from his Witvlei farm on Saturday that he fully backed VO Security and there would be no inquiry.

On the overall results this year he said: "It was a good show". He was especially happy the show society seems to have hit the right note and attracted large audiences from Katutura and Khomasdal for its line-up of stars, including Yvonne Chaka Chaka and baby, Rebecca Malope and others.

School groups were also made very welcome and many enjoyed the show, while the Thursday night fireworks could gions it has seized.

Despite the September 20th ceasefire it was reported yesterday that Unita have attacked government troops near the central town of Kuito.

They said the attack occurred on Saturday on a road between Kuito and the town of Kunje, causing an unknown number of injuries. The reported clash was the first such incident in Kuito since Unita declared its unilateral ceasefire.

According to local press reports, more than 18 000 people were killed in the region during fighting between January and September that prevented humanitarian aid from reaching survivors.

The UN special envoy to Angola, Alioune Blondin Beye, said Unita also refused last week to authorise a team of experts to travel to the region to evaluate the food situation.

The government daily Jornal de Angola meanwhile reported that government troops retook the town of Kuvango in the southern Huila province last Wednesday. Since mid-September the Angolan army has recaptured four towns in the war-ravaged country. - Sapa-AFP

Criminals told: 'beat it or bust'

CRIMINAL activities were increasing on a daily basis and Namibians needed to co-operate with the police fully to help put a stop to these activities.

This warning was sounded by the Councillor for the Hakahana Constituency, Erasmus Kaptein Hendjala, when he addressed squatters north of Okuryangava, Katutura, yesterday morning.

Hendjala said the Government was very concerned about crime and each and everybody was requested to try to stop this evil.

He reminded residents that if they bought stolen items, it served as an encouragement to thieves.

Further, some people also sheltered criminals in their homes, while others helped store stolen items.

"The thieves will not stop stealing if you are buying their goods," he added.

Hendjala warned that some houses in Katutura, especially in Ombili, had been identified as 'criminal dens'. He added that the police could swoop on these houses and search them "at any time".

The Regional Councillor also expressed his concern about alcohol abuse and said he believed that most criminal cases in Namibia were caused by alcohol.

He reminded people that alcohol was not only a danger to their health, but also threatened Namibia's future "and the future of our children".

Hendjala urged people to stop drinking alcohol and to rather use their time and energy to help build the country.

He also asked residents to stop carrying dangerous weapons like knives and firearms.

The unnecessary shooting of firearms in the area would not be tolerated and that such incidents should be immediately reported to the police.

N$10,5 million to save mine

IN A BID to save 130 miners' jobs, the Ministry of Mines and Energy last week lent N$10,5 million to Okurusu fluorspar mine. The mine could have closed because of low world prices for fluorspar coupled with a change from chloro-fluoro-carbon chemicals to protect the atmosphere.

It is the first spending of a N$160 million grant from European Community under a programme called Sysmin. Thirteen mainly private mining projects will borrow the funds and, when repaid, they will be lent to other projects.

There is no news on suggestions the money could have been worth some N$40 million more had it been brought into Namibia via financial rand. Behind the scenes work may be in action but acting head of the EC delegation Jan de Kok said last week he was still waiting to hear from the Government.

Okurusu mine is mainly owned by two South African companies, Carbo Mina Mining Company and Iscor via Imcor Tin. It started production in 1988 and use fluorspar. The Namibian product is apparently very high quality.

The loan is over 13 years at annual interest of 6 per cent a year. Hugo says Okurusu had been cutting back on essential capital spending to avoid laying off the workers, and the loan will be used for jobs such as stripping more earth and other materials which cover the fluorspar.

The Sysmin grant will back projects including Tschudi mine if Goldfields Namibia decides to go ahead with this, better exploration of Otjiase mine, drilling Nossob river for diamonds, helping a granite tiling plant at Karibib, development at Navachab gold mine, more surveys and the Namibia Institute for Mining Technology, as well as an environmental survey at Tsumeb smelter.

An administrator needs to be appointed for the programme. De Kok said this person should be appointed by the end of the year.

Mines and Energy permanent secretary Leake Hangala said much work had already been done on the Sysmin spending since the approval of the grant in March and "similar (loan) announcements can be expected in the not too distant future."

JOB-SAVER ... This N$10,5 million loan aims to save miners' jobs and comes from the European Community aid to mining. (from left are) Jan de Kok of the EC, Leake Hangala permanent secretary of the Ministry of Mines and Energy, and Tony Buchan, chair of Okurusu Fluorspar.

be seen all over the city.

Pack also paid tribute to the hard work of show society office staff and elected officials. In future years the Windhoek show could get even bigger as Pack said he had complaints from as far as Otjiwarongo and Keetmanshoop that there is not enough time for people to come from outside and visit it.

Here are some of the traders' comments:

* Leon Tsamkxao of Nyae Nyae Crafts, selling Bushman handicrafts such as carvings, burnt wood pictures, leather pouches and 'beautiful' bead necklaces which are also available from their office in 9 Delius Street, Windhoek West: "We did sell a lot but not so good as it might have been. We sold mainly bags (used for carrying tobacco, money and other valuables), necklaces and bows. We are not sure if we will come back, we will have to check first."

* Mario Ott of Pottery Association, selling pottery goods on behalf of the many individual members: "We are very happy. We had a lot more sales than last year."

* Alan and June Crook of Cape Town, selling Bajaj scooters, motorcycles and three-wheelers which can normally be bought at Croeser's Motors: "We are very pleased with the show, we have had a lot of inquiries and have even sold a scooter to a grandmother. We put special prices on some models such as a new 50cc bike for under N$3 000 including tax.

There is more and more demand for the three-wheelers (N$10 995 including tax) as people's imagination gets fired on what they can do with them - already they work as everything from 'mum's taxi' to driving for a florist, bakery, take away shop and stationers. We also have a very tough big wheel motorcycle which is very popular in West Africa and we'd welcome any inquiries from other potential dealers in Namibia.

* Paul Ackerman of Gobabis-based Solid Hardwood Furniture: "Enthusiasm is very good, and the stall drew a lot of attention. We're quite satisfied and hoping to conclude quite a lot of deals. Our prices are a bit lower than usual but its going well and I'll definitely be back."

* Trevor Mills of Schoemans office equipment: "The stall is going great. We have sold out of one model of computer, the Amba 486, and are close to selling out of Auva 386s, and sold well in laserjet printers and software at special show prices. We did some training about exhibitions and there has been a much better response this year. We took more space and put the whole company on display with computers outside so the children could play while potential buyers also got a chance to get on the machines and try out packages inside. We chose the right things for the right event and we'll be back next year."

* Sigi Kessler of Elwere: "The show was OK, we've got a new line of garden tractors which is attracting interest. We put in shade cloth and made the stand more welcoming and if all the promises turn into deals, business will be up about 20 per cent for the rest of the year - but of course not all the pledges will turn out as deals. We wanted to be social as in business there is no time to talk to people and sort out problems or prevent future problems."

* Max of Cartel Marketing: "It's a terrible show with too many exhibitors and too few people, and people complain the products are too expensive. But on the whole its better than Pretoria and some in South Africa and I probably would come back next year."

* Simon Schaimberg of Inca Crafts: "It's a very good show, its got a lot of potential. We did not sell many goods but the show has created influence and by next year people will go into South American crafts. The clothes are very strong, fashionable all over the world."

Stiff warning on squatters

TYAPPA NAMUTEWA

PEOPLE who illegally accommodated squatters in Municipal areas would not be provided with facilities like water and electricity, the Councillor for the Hakahana Constituency, Erasmus Kaptein Hendjala, warned yesterday.

Hendjala added that they should also be ready to be moved to other areas at any time.

This stiff warning came when Hendjala addressed illegal squatters near Okuryangava yesterday.

More than 2 000 people are squatting in the area south of Okuryangava along the Brakwater road.

After putting up shelters, they have started demanding that the Municipality supply them with water.

Hendjala reminded the squatters that they were there illegally and that the Municipality could not provide them with water.

"If you demand water, it is the same as a burglar who has broken into a house and then asks the owner to give him food," Hendjala said. He added that they were only there at the mercy of the Government.

Hendjala informed the squatters that they would be moved to another area where they could buy plots.

The area which has been earmarked is far to the north of Okuryangava. There they will be provided with communal waterpoints and toilet facilities.

After plots had been demarcated, people could buy them and build houses according to their income.

He also urged people to stop squatting "just anywhere".

Hendjala told residents that all Councillors had been given a message from President Sam Nujoma to inform all those people in Windhoek, or elsewhere in the South, who were unemployed but who had mahangu fields to go to the North to start work on their Mahangu fields as the rains had already started.

The President has also requested those squatting in the hills and in riverbeds to move elsewhere.

He warned that those living in riverbeds could easily drown when it rains heavily, while the squatters in the hills faced danger from wind storms.

GRIEF STRICKEN ... The widow of Pakkie Nujoma, Hileni (in black clothes) paid her last respects during the memorial service in the Katutura Lutheran church on Friday. She was comforted by friends as she left the church. President Sam Nujoma is seen on the left.

BEST STAND award at the Windhoek Show, known as the Standard Bank trophy, went to Okahandja-based company Prothatch Namibia. Proud owner André van Dyk said he learnt thatching at Mokuti Lodge and now employs 40 in making these well-insulated roofs which he says do not need maintaining for 20 years and are completely waterproof.

MORE manufacturing is urgently needed said Prime Minister Hage Geingob as he performed the official opening ceremony for the Windhoek show on Thursday night.

Geingob said manufacturing only makes up five per cent of the economy - and the target is to double that.

"Then, and only then, would we be able to say that we have made a transition from being just producers of raw materials to being producers of goods and services with increasing value added."

Geingob added that although this year the economy had been "lacklustre", the Government is full of hope for next year, 1994, which "is seen by us to be the year of well above-average growth".

He was proud of the fact that despite one of the worst droughts of the century, the show had not only gone ahead, but had been the biggest so far. "This year's show ... also shows the resilience of this nation and the confidence the farmers and the traders have in the future of their country".

Geingob said manufacturing is seen as having the biggest potential for growth and that is why the Government is promoting it with considerable incentives. He said service industries are another area the Government plans to encourage.

The Prime Minister was full of praise for the show organisers, and all the participants who had made this year's Windhoek show such a big success. He said the quality of livestock on show proved how resilient a nation Namibians are: "Clearly we are a hardy nation, a nation of survivors. We not only managed the drought but are directing our efforts towards rebuilding what our farmers lost during the drought."

His words of praise also went to the Show society and President Ulli Pack who together had organised a much wider range of stalls and bigger participation by farmers, as well as a giant entertainment programme.

"Their effort has made the show a great success, as can be seen by the increased participation and increased number of visitors."

As well as the farmers and their animals, Geingob said he was delighted by the 300 commercial and industrial stalls in the halls and another 100 open air stalls after space ran out.

"I also note with pleasure the informal sector has not been overlooked. We have, in fact, been working towards promoting this sector which holds great potential for employment creation and self-employment."

'Pakkie' laid to rest

TYAPPA NAMUTEWA

AROUND 1 000 people turned out to pay their last respects to John Ndeshipanda 'Pakkie' Nujoma, the second eldest son of President Sam Nujoma, at the Old Cemetery in Hochlandpark on Saturday.

Pakkie died in the Windhoek Central Hospital on Monday last week following a short illness.

A memorial service conducted by CCN general Secretary Ngeno Nakamhela was held in the Evangelical Lutheran Church in Katutura on Friday. During the service, Eddy Amkongo, permanent secretary at State House, announced that 166 messages of condolences had poured into State House from all over the world - including from the head of the Commonwealth, Queen Elizabeth II and US President Bill Clinton as well as from several other heads of state.

Members of the Mukorob Tigers Soccer Club, of which Pakkie was a member, formed the guard of honour and carried the coffin into the church and to the cemetery.

Sakkie Namugongo, also a member of Mukorob Tigers, read a message of condolence on behalf of the club, while Mocks Shivute, a friend from childhood, read the eulogy. In an emotional scene, the widow, Hileni paid her last respects to her husband. She was comforted by friends and family.

The funeral on Saturday was conducted by the head of ELCIN, Bishop Kleopas Dumeni and Home Affairs Minister Hifikepunye Pohamba read a message from the Government on behalf of Prime Minister Hage Geingob who could not attend.

In his message, Geingob thanked President Nujoma on behalf of the Cabinet for his dedication and commitment despite the untimely death of his son. According to Geingob, President Nujoma was informed of the death of his son while he was in a meeting, but had continued until the end. Although the Cabinet had excused him, President Nujoma also attended the weekly Cabinet meeting on Tuesday. Aaron Mushimba, the uncle of the deceased, spoke on behalf of the family and thanked everyone who attended the funeral. Representatives from the north of the country who attended the funeral included Ondonga King, Immanuel Kauluma Elifas, and King Shikongo Taapopi from Uukwaludhi.

New handbook for workers

THE NUNW has launched a simplified handbook on the Namibian Labour Act to help members know, understand and use the Act.

The booklet was prepared for the NUNW by four English Barristers at the request of the International Centre for Trade Union Rights.

It focuses on basic trade union rights for workers and trade unions as stipulated in the Labour Act.

Through the booklet the Labour Act was condensed from 135 to 31 pages, which it is hoped will help in the distribution of information and knowledge.

Democracy summit

ETHNICITY, nation-building and democracy will come under the spotlight during a conference organised by the Namibia Institute for Democracy at Mokuti Lodge from October 15-17.

Co-ordinator of the Institute, Theunis Keulder told The Namibian that the aim was to make recommendations on bonding a multi-cultural society into one nation.

The conference, held in co-operation with the Konrad Adenauer Foundation, will be officially opened by Prime Minister Hage Geingob.

Prominent officials from Government and private sector will speak on various topics including factors in the historical heritage of Namibia that encourage or impede the development of democracy; common versus customary law; religious values and secular influences; a free market versus a centralised economy; and the problem of ethnicity in a unitary state.

Speeches would be followed by panel discussions after which the conference would work out recommendations.

Baby killing

THE trial of a young mother accused of strangling her baby to death in a toilet in Katutura is to start in the Magistrates Court today.

At her first appearance, the 23-year-old woman denied any guilt. Apparently a learner from the North, she told the court she went to take a bath when she suddenly felt pains. She gave birth to a baby girl but said the infant was dead on birth.

The young woman was treated at Katutura State Hospital. When she was discharged, a charge of murder was immediately laid against her.

Strike threatens Ark

CHRISTOF MALETSKY

WORKERS at Ark Trading Building and Industrial Supplies will down tools today unless the company re-instates a worker allegedly dismissed without warning last week.

According to the organiser of the Namibia Building Workers Union, David Paulus, approximately 25 workers out of a total of 33 at the company will go on strike and picket the workplace if their colleague, Paul Dirkse, is not re-instated or receives his outstanding pay.

Paulus said Dirkse had worked for the company for two months when he became sick and was granted sick leave of one day by his doctor. When he returned to work the next day, he was told he had been dismissed.

According to Paulus, Dirkse had not been given any warning, although he had the doctor's certificate, and was only paid for the day he had worked after pay-day.

When the union inquired into the matter, Ark Trading said Dirkse had been on two months' probation, but Paulus claims there was no such agreement and that the company has no proof of such a contract.

Paulus claimed that one of the directors said that the workers thought they could do anything they wanted to. He added that the workers did not have freedom of association at the company and accused management of not implementing the Labour Act.

"They call the police whenever the workers have a problem which affects both sides," he alleged. According to Paulus, workers were determined to take action and would picket the premises to prevent anyone doing business with the company.

Attempts to get comment from the company failed at the time of going to press.

Fraud case today

ONE of the six civil servants arrested on charges of fraud in the Prime Minister's office will appear before the Magistrates Court for the second time today.

Eric Nicolaas Meyer (30), an account operator with office's data services system, appeared in court briefly almost two weeks ago but was not asked to plead. He is out on bail of N$500.

It is alleged that Meyer and five others were involved in a fraud scam in which more than 30 cheques could be involved.

Earlier a police source indicated to The Namibian that the arrests could lead to the rooting out of 'a large operation'. More arrests have not been ruled out.

In the same week that Meyer appeared in court, Anita Garises who works in the registration section of the Ministry of Agriculture, Water and Rural Development, also appeared in the Magistrates Court. Garises was charged with receiving stolen goods.

She pleaded not guilty and the case was postponed to November. She was also released on bail as charges had not been formulated.

Bulls fetch high prices

TOM MINNEY

THE showground cattle auction ring looks like an ancient theatre, a ring of steeply climbing benches and in the middle a sweet-smelling sawdust circle. The benches are rooved and on Friday morning were packed with cattlemen and women from Namibia and abroad, the ring is open under the sky.

In walks the first bull, a Simmenthaler, and with a handler leading parades around the ring. In a stand at the top is master of ceremonies, professional stud auctioneer Mike Kilassy of Pretoria, who soon starts the sing-song round of prices and "six-thousand two fifty against you sir" delivered at break-neck pace that means thousands of dollars about to change hands.

The bull parades until the bidding is done and then walks out while the seller is quickly consulted to see if the price is good enough for the sale to go ahead. Throats are dry and farmers watch each other's faces from under wide-brimmed hats, while two men standing each side of Kilassy spotting the discreet flash of another bid. In walks the next bull and the process begins again.

By the end of the day, a total of 52 of the 81 bulls offered had been sold at an average price of N$6 110, so that in all N$317 750 changed hands. Heifers, as usual, were not nearly so popular, and only six of the 17 offered were sold at an average price of N$2 100, bringing the overall sale at the livestock auction to N$330 350. Farmers had seen many of the bulls on sale evaluated by professional judges over the last few days, and were buying in order to produce calves that would boost the quality of their herds. The Windhoek show sale is the biggest in Namibia, but is followed by many other sales this month as farmers get ready for a breeding season between December and February.

Agra's Dave Morley said prices at the auction had been good and many of the sellers were happy. The prices and the turnover were better this year than last year and although the overall sales and numbers of animals sold were higher in 1991, the average prices this year were better.

The top price was N$15 000 for a Simbra bull belonging to Wolfhard Aring of Gobabis, bought by Professor C L Steenkamp of Lydenburg in South Africa. "It is a feather in our cap that he came all this way to buy stock" says Morley. He added the high prices could be seen as a sign of confidence.

Namibians die in Angolan mine blast

OSWALD SHIVUTE AT ONDJIVA

THREE Namibians were killed when their mini-bus detonated a landmine at Omupanda village, between Oshikango and Ondjiva in southern Angola, 30 kms north of the Oshikango border post, late on Wednesday afternoon.

The Namibians killed were CDM worker Peter Jeronimu Haloodi from Omuthiyagwiipundi in Ondonga area, Clementu Eramisu and a certain Kamboy. An Angolan policeman and two other Angolan citizens were also killed, while nine occupants survived the incident. On Thursday, the Angolan and Namibian authorities made arrangements to bring the bodies of the Namibians to Namibia. However, when the Namibian Police arrived at Ondjiva to fetch the bodies they found they had already been buried. The Angolan Police said except for Kamboy who was "a pure Namibian", the other Namibians had been born there.

Market round-up

FRANKFURT: Share markets closed at record highs in Frankfurt, London, Zurich and Stockholm on Friday as hopes for global economic recovery and easier credit took hold. The Frankfurt bourse closed at an all-time high for the fourth consecutive day, astonishing traders who had expected interest to peter out as the weekend approached.

The 30-share DAX index ended up 7.97 points at 2,005.01, closing above the 2,000 mark for the first time ever as a week-long rally continued.

Swiss shares hit their third record high of the week with the blue-chip SMI index adding 5.8 points to close at 2,533.8. News that several banks had cut cash bond rates and were lowering mortgage rates brought new money into the bourse.

In London, a late rally shook the market out of a directionless drift, and the Financial Times-Stock Exchange 100-share index ended at its highest closing level so far, rising 16.2 points to 3,108.6.

Dealers said the gains arose from continued stock shortages and after a rally in FTSE futures.

Stockholm's OM index, based on 25 shares on the main bourse list, also finished at a new all-time closing high of 1,052.27, up from 1,044.89, after heavy turnover.

The Paris bourse rallied, shadowing other European markets, with the CAC-40 index ahead 8.97 points at 2,156.38 but off its record high of 2,222.87.

Dutch shares were expected to scale new highs next week after closing mostly firmer on Friday. The EOE index finished 0.28 points higher at 360.76, within striking distance of the all-time high of 367.23 set on August 31.

Strong buying continued into electronic inter-bank trading in Germany after bourse floor trading had closed, and market participants said the bull trend seemed unstoppable.

"Everyone is extremely bullish... above the 2,000 level there are no (chart) resistance levels," one trader said. Liquidity from investment funds, keen to move out of lower yielding money market funds as German interest rates slide, had flooded the market, dealers said.

Klaus Roepke, analyst at James Capel in Frankfurt, was confident share prices would continue to climb. "We are in a liquidity boom," he said.

German stocks have been gaining strongly since Russian president Boris Yeltsin successfully fought off a challenge by Parliament to his rule at the start of this week.

Prospects for even lower interest rates and hopes that Germany is beginning to crawl out of its worst post-war recession have further bolstered the market.

US debates Somalia pull-out as Mogadishu demo supports Aidid

NAIROBI: As a fierce debate over US policy in Somalia dominated the American news media, thousands of Somali men, women and children took to the streets yesterday to support warlord Mohammed Farrah Aidid.

Maj. David Stockwell, a UN military spokesman, said an estimated 2000 demonstrators in Mogadishu, the Somali capital, shouted slogans against the United Nations and the United States. He had no further details.

Yesterday's demonstration coincided with the arrival in Mogadishu of Robert Oakley, a US envoy appointed by President Clinton to seek a diplomatic solution to Somalia's problems.

UN forces have sought - without success - to arrest Aidid since accusing him of masterminding a June 5th attack which killed 24 Pakistani peacekeepers. Instead, Aidid's forces have bogged down nearly half of the United Nations' 28 000 troops in urban guerilla warfare in Mogadishu.

On Saturday, Aidid said he was ordering his militiamen to stop fighting. The fugitive Somali leader, speaking on his clandestine radio, also said he would accept an investigation into the June ambush, according to Cable News Network and the British Broadcasting Corp.

But despite the cease-fire offer, the United Nations said its military mission had not changed. "Aidid is still vulnerable to detention," Stockwell said.

Spokesman Capt. Tim MacDavitt said the United Nations had not received an official notice of Aidid's offer of a truce. He said no fighting was reported overnight Saturday in the volatile Somali capital, but attributed the quiet to a downpour rather than Aidid's order.

The relative quiet contrasts sharply with a 15-hour battle between Aidid's forces and UN peacekeepers previous Sunday. The Red Cross says more than 700 Somalis were wounded - and Aidid says 315 Somalis were killed - as UN forces tried to capture some of the warlord's top aides. In the US the media debate focused on whether American troops should be brought home. - Sapa-AP

Swazi traditional power reduced

MBABANE: Swazis vote today in the final round of the southern African kingdom's first free parliamentary elections in 20 years.

Citizens of Swaziland, which has about 900 000 people, have been allowed to choose their own candidates for parliament instead of endorsing those put forward by traditional chiefs.

"At long last we can now talk of democracy in Swaziland. We the people of this country have been allowed to make a choice, something we were deprived in the past," one voter said.

In the preliminary round held a fortnight ago, the 283 693 registered voters whittled down a record 2 094 candidates to three for each of 55 districts in the mountainous country sandwiched between Mozambique and South Africa.

Prime Minister Obed Dlamini and four of his ministers made it through the first-round voting.

The elections have been hailed by the government and Western diplomats as a breakthrough for democracy but the tiny opposition has branded the process as a farce.

"Voters have a free and secret vote to cast their ballot for whoever they want to and this is democracy," said chief electoral officer Robert Twala.

But Dominic Mngomezulu of the People's United Democratic Movement said: "So long as there are repressive laws in the land, no elections can be free and fair."

Under the revised political system, King Mswati III will appoint 10 people to the lower house of parliament while the other 55 will be elected. The king will also pick 20 people for the senate, while the lower house will elect 10 senators from among its members, effectively leaving it with 55 seats. The king will also appoint the prime minister.

Swaziland's senior prince, Prince Mfanasibili, warned that members of the country's new cabinet might in future try to transfer executive powers from the king to the prime minister.

"We cannot afford to allow this to happen because that would be suicidal. A king without executive powers is not a king but just a doll. He cannot do anything even when things go wrong."

Joburg spurs on gold

LONDON: Gold shares were higher in sympathy with the continuing firmer trend on the Johannesburg market, encouraged by a higher bullion price, dealers said.

Amgold added 10 cents at $7.35, Freegold firmed 40 cents to $12.35 and Ofsil gained 13 cents to $30.75. De Beers added six cents to $19.57. Gold was fixed here this afternoon at $358.50 an ounce.

SADF raid condemned

Apla denies house was fighters' base

JOHANNESBURG: The war of words between the Azanian Peoples Liberation Army (Apla) and the SA Defence Force following a raid on an Umtata house last Friday continued yesterday.

In the SABC television programme, "Newline", Apla commander Sabelo Phama charged the Ministry of Defence had acted on incorrect intelligence as the attacked house was not a base for the PAC military wing.

"We do not have Apla in Umtata or in the Transkei, but an innocent family was attacked. People that were attacked were school-going children."

Phama said he would understand the SADF action if it was aimed at Apla instead of innocent people as both parties were at war with each other. Apla, he said, was fighting a liberation war against "reactionary violence of the racist regime".

SADF communications chief Dr Das Herbst, however, insisted the house was used as an Apla facility, adding sufficient intelligence had been obtained to that effect.

"One of the objectives of the Defence Force was to strike at a verified Apla facility. The evidence that has been brought out in the form of ammunition, weapons, documents and even number plates illustrate very clearly that that house was not simply an ordinary dwelling, where people lived."

Dr Herbst said it was regrettable people were killed, but "in the situation like this, we are satisfied that at least three trained people of Apla were killed and that two others were collaborators".

Asked about the effect of the strike on proposed talks between Apla and the SA authorities, Phama said the government was now waging a full war against the black community.

"And Apla has a duty to counter reactionary violence with revolutionary violence," he added.

Earlier, the principal of Holomisa Senior Secondary School, Mashanma Nikelo, confirmed that three of the people killed were pupils at his school. He said the Mpendulo twins were 16-years-old and the other, Tando Mthembu, also attended the school and was aged 17.

Meanwhile the Azanian Peoples Organisation (Azapo) joined the chorus of anger against the SA Defence Force Raid on an Umtata house last week.

In a statement, Azapo president Professor Itumeleng Mosala charged the "callous murder of the children of a PAC comrade...constitutes the continuation of war by white people against black people, which has been intensified since the false and deceitful declaration of reform by (President F W) de Klerk in 1990". - Sapa

Pakistan in vote deadlock

ISLAMABAD: Pakistan was facing a new political crisis yesterday after inconclusive results from national and provincial polls, despite an edge to former Premier Benazir Bhutto nationally and in one crucial state.

When the final votes came in from Punjab mid-morning, without which Bhutto has said she cannot govern in Islamabad, commentators said the state - and the country - were "in the hands of independents," and some said a new election must be called.

The election commission said Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party (PPP) had taken 94 seats, and its allied Pakistan Muslim League-Junejo 18 seats for a total of 112 in the 240 seat provincial assembly.

But Sharif, also an ex-premier, alone took 106 seats in his home province of Punjab, and was seen as likely to be able to garner enough seats to form a government in the province with the help of independents and smaller parties that netted 17 and five seats respectively.

The results were a mirror-image of national polls Wednesday which gave Bhutto an 86-72 edge, but left her facing the prospect of a weak government and a strong opposition, and by her own admission, far short of the two-thirds majority she would need to govern effectively.

"The election has failed to resolve the crisis. The fight was between two main parties, but the balance of power is in the hands of independents," said Pakistani intellectual and columnist Anwar Khalil. "They have become the decisive power. It has opened up a Pandora's box of problems."

"It (the two stage elections) was a drama without a climax," he added. An interim government had, with the backing of Pakistan's powerful military, called the elections in an effort to solve a drawn-out crisis which began in March of this year with a power-struggle between Sharif, who was then prime minister and then-president Ghulam Ishaq Khan.

"In terms of ending the crisis," said another Pakistani journalist, "This election was a complete flop. We'll have to have another." - Sapa-AFP

Libya resists Mid-East tide

TRIPOLI: Libya yesterday appealed to Third World countries not to recognise Israel until a new Palestinian state was created in place of the Jewish state, the official Jana news agency reported.

The agency reported that the foreign ministry called on "brother countries in the Third World to halt recognition of Israel and reverse their (recognition) decisions which reward the aggressor and encourage (Israel) to continue its aggression," in a statement issued yesterday.

The statement was issued at the end of a visit by the president of Burkina Faso, Blaise Compaore, during which he met his Libyan counterpart Moamer Kadhafi.

Burkina Faso re-established relations with Israel last Tuesday after a 20-year break. It said the move had been prompted by the Israeli-PLO autonomy accord, which Libya rejects.

The only solution to the Palestinian problem was the return home of the Palestinian diaspora and the creation of a new state, in place of Israel, which could then be recognised, the statement said.

Libya and Iraq are the only two Arab countries to have rejected the accord signed last month between the Palestine Liberation Organisation and Israel, which has also been rejected vehemently by Iran. - Sapa-AFP

Attackers called 'scum'

JERUSALEM: An Israeli minister said yesterday Palestinian guerrillas opposed to the Israel-PLO peace accord were "scum who want to get in and unravel the seam". Environment Minister Yossi Sarid was speaking after Arab gunmen killed two Israeli hikers on Saturday in Wadi Qelt, a scenic riverbed in the occupied West Bank near Jericho.

Officials believe the attack was carried out by Arabs who view the accord signed last month to give Palestinians limited self-rule in the occupied territories as a sell-out.

"We are talking about a very sensitive period, a dangerous period, because the old situation is no longer but the new situation has not yet come to be," Sarid told reporters. Rescue workers recovered the bodies of Dror Forer, 25, and Eran Bachar, 23, on Saturday night in Wadi Qelt which begins near Jerusalem and runs through Jericho 40 kms away.

The four gunmen fled after they shot the hikers, slashed their throats and crushed their skulls with stones, witnesses said.

Tears flow for slain student

GUGULETU: One by one, the family of slain American scholar Amy Biehl shed tears yesterday as they placed flowers at the spot where she died in an attack by a mob of black youths.

Biehl's parents, Linda and Peter, and her siblings, Molly, Kim and Zach, went to the fence in the black township of Guguletu where the 26-year-old woman collapsed after being hit in the face with a brick and stabbed on August 25.

Her fiancé, Scott Meinert, stood back silently until the other family members and a large media contingent walked away. Then Meinert, who told a reporter he had not wanted to go to the scene, walked up and fell to his knees with his head in his hands, sobbing, and put down flowers.

Meanwhile, another white American woman was in stable condition after being stabbed in Cape Town on Friday night. Danielle Marlin, 24, a mathematics teacher at a multiracial school, said her two attackers were of mixed-race origin, and she knew one of them. Police said two mixed-race youths, ages 13 and 18, were arrested.

African National Congress Youth League leader Peter Mokaba, who joined the Biehl family Sunday, condemned both attacks as "racist."

"We don't need a racial war," he said. Six men and a 15-year-old youth will be charged with murder, public violence and robbery on November 8. Four belong to the PAC's student wing.

Earlier, a packed St. Gabriel's Catholic Church in Guguletu applauded the Biehl family at a service held in Amy's honour. The Rev. Basil van Rensburg praised Amy as a person who chose to serve others "instead of tanning on a California beach and frolicking in fashionable discotheques by night."

ANC official Dullah Omar, who worked with Amy in South Africa, called her "a comrade" and "a victim of apartheid." Peter Biehl told the church he was "grateful" Amy was mentioned as one of the 16 000 people killed in South Africa's political violence.

"Amy would have been embarrassed to be singled out for special attention," he said. "You have made it much easier for us to have counted her amongst the many thousands of her brothers and sisters who have given their lives in the struggle." - Sapa-AP

Esau verdedig bande met Swapo

DIE National Union of Namibian Workers (NUNW) sê die dekking wat deur die media aan sy jongste kongres gegee is, is vals en skep die indruk dat die unie nie genoeg geleentheid gegee het om die kwessie van affiliasie by die regerende party te bespreek nie.

Bernhardt Esau, sekretaris-generaal, sê die unie sien die verslaggewing as jammerlik omdat dit 'n erg verdraaide beeld gee van wat in werklikheid tydens die kongres gebeur het.

Die NUNW sê die algemene indruk wat geskep word is dat die unie debatvoering oor affiliasie gestrem het terwyl dit nie die geval was nie.

Die unie sê dit is waar dat daar in die verlede konsensus was dat die kwessie van voortgesette affiliasie nie deeglik bespreek is nie, maar tydens die jongste kongres is die debat deeglik opgeneem deur diegene betrokke.

Teenstrydig met die algemene geloof in die media het dit tydens die debat geblyk dat die oorweldigende meerderheid van afgevaardigdes ten gunste van affiliasie by Swapo is.

Daarom sê die unie dit is absoluut vals om voor te gee dat afgevaardigdes op die een of ander wyse gedruk is om ten gunste van voortgesette affiliasie te wees.

Drie van die lidunies van die beweging, Nantu, Mun en Natau, was ten gunste van disaffiliasie tydens die kongres en het voorstelle in die verband gemaak. Lede van die unies was egter met die bespreking van die resoluë nie bereid om op te staan en hul standpunte te motiveer nie.

Dit is ook vals om te sê daar is nie deeglik gestem oor die affiliasie by Swapo nie aangesien die voorsitter gevra het vir stemming en niemand het reageer nie.

Oor die kwessie van affiliasie sê die unie, wat saak maak en wat bespreek moet word is nie of die unie affilieer is by die party nie maar of dit onafhanklik en outonoom optree.

Die feit dat daar vernamte verskille tussen die unie en die party was behoort voldoende bewys te wees dat die unie onafhanklik van die party optree.

Selfs nou is daar vernamte verskille tussen die unie en die party en die NUNW was een van die vernaamste kritici van die regering oor die toepassing van landhervorming en die herintegrasie van Walvisbaai by Namibië.

Dit is ook bekend dat die NUNW en die regering vernamte meningsverskille het oor wat die unie beskou as vernamte tekortkominge in die Arbeidskode.

Dit is ook vals om wil voor te gee dat die unie nie omgee vir die opvoeding van die werkers nie.

Die unie het reeds sy eie geleentheidprogram van stapel gestuur en het verlede jaar meer as sestig werksinkels aangebied vir die opleiding van sy lede.

Daarbenewens het die unie 'n handboek saamgestel vir sy werkers wat wyd gebruik word binne werkgroepe.

Die verslaggewing rondom die dubbele leierskapsrol van sekere NUNW-leiers is ook nie raak nie.

Esau sê hy is nie 'n werker van Swapo nie maar bloot 'n lid van die sentrale komitee. Hy is ook nie tot die sentrale komitee verkies in sy persoonlike hoedanigheid nie maar as 'n verteenwoordiger van die NUNW.

Verskeie senior lede van die regering het die naweek die begrafnis van President Nujoma se tweede oudste seun John Pakkie Nujoma bygewoon.

Plak nie oral toelaatbaar

MENSE wat onwettiglik plakkershuise oprig in munisipale gebiede sal nie voorsien word met geriewe soos elektrisiteit en water nie het Erasmus Kaptein Hendjala, verteenwoordiger vir Hakahana die naweek gesê.

Hulle moet ook gereed wees om na ander gebiede geneem te word, het hy bygevoeg.

Hendjala het gister plakkers naby Okuryangava toegesprek.

Meer as tweeduisend mense het hul wonings opgesit net ten suide van Okuryangava op die pad na Brakwater.

Hulle dring nou daarop aan dat die munisipaliteit hul van water en elektrisiteit moet voorsien.

Hendjala het die groep meegedeel dat hul onwettig op die grond is en dat die munisipaliteit hul nie van water kan voorsien nie.

Hy het hul ook vertel dat hul slegs op genade van die regering daar is en terenige tyd daarvandaan verwyder kan word.

Hendjala het ook terselfdertyd die groep plakkers ingelig dat hul verskuif kan word na 'n ander plek waar erwe aan hul toegeken sal word om te koop.

Hulle sal ook voorsien word met kommunale waterpunte en toiletgeriewe.

Na die afbakening van hul erwe sal hul in staat gestel word om dit te koop en hul huise daarop op te rig.

Hendjala het ook die groep ontmoedig om sommerenige plekke te plak.

Hendjala sê President Nujoma het raadslede versoek om werkloos wat in Windhoek woon maar mahango-velde in die noorde besit mee te deel om terug te gaan en hul velde te versorg aangesien die reënseisoen reeds begin het.

Jubilation as Nigeria qualifies

LAGOS: Nigerians put the country's political strife briefly to one side at the weekend and took to the streets in their thousands to celebrate the country's first qualification for the World Cup finals.

Nigeria booked their place in next year's finals in America thanks to a draw in their African Zone qualifier when they held Algeria 1-1 on Friday in Algiers, Algeria.

Parts of Lagos were transformed into massive traffic jams within less than an hour of the encounter while crowds of pedestrians roamed the streets and accompanied the car horns with chants of, "USA here we come."

The raucous scene were in sharp contrast to a few hours earlier when the city was like a ghost town with everyone indoors watching the crucial match on television.

Newspapers on Saturday saluted the 'historic victory' with banner front page headlines.

Nigeria's ascent to the top of African football had long been anticipated.

They won the World Junior Cup in 1985 and again this year but have until now failed to fulfil their potential at senior level.

Needing one point from Friday's match to head the Ivory Coast on goal average and qualify from Group A, Nigerian nerves were settled when right winger Kinedi put them ahead after 19 minutes.

But attempts to sit on that advantage backfired when Tassafout equalised for Algeria in the 66th minute, ensuring a tense final for the watching millions.

It took a last minute goalmouth clearane to prevent Tassafout scoring the winner for Algeria but Nigeria held on to secure the first of three slots for the African continent in the 1994 finals - Sapa.

Zambia's miracle comeback ended

CASABLANCA: Morocco ended Zambia's miracle comeback yesterday, qualifying for the 1994 World Cup final with a 1-0 victory over a team that rebuilt after 18 players died in an April plane crash.

Zambia, which needed only a tie to advance to the finals for the first time, played well in the first half but seemed to lose momentum after Morocco's Abdeslam Laghrissi, in front of the goal, converted a pass from Abdelkrim El Hadroui in the 50th minute.

At the final whistle, hundreds of fans from the standing-room crowd of more than 100 000 rushed onto the field to celebrate.

Morocco will be making its third trip to the World Cup finals, having qualified in 1970 and 1986. It joined Cameroon and Nigeria as the three African representatives among the 24-team field that will compete in the United States next year.

Zim cup hopes die

YAOUNDE: The Indomitable Lions of Cameroon, sweethearts of the 1990 World Cup, qualified for the 1994 finals with a 3-1 victory yesterday over Zimbabwe.

The victors' star was midfielder Francois Omam Biyick, who scored on a penalty kick in the 14th minute and beat Zimbabwe goalie Bruce Grobbelaar 11 minutes later to forge a 2-0 lead. The goals sent the sell-out crowd of 91 200 into a frenzy of cheering and backslapping as Cameroon marched to its third berth in a World Cup final.

Matinda Ndlovu scored for Zimbabwe in the 85th minute, but Maboang Kessack extinguished any hopes of a comeback when he fired Cameroon's third goal three minutes later.

The Indomitable Lions stole the hearts of soccer fans in the 1990 World Cup, when their free-wheeling, inspired play brought them to the quarterfinals. They lost, 3-2, to England.

Cameroon, which also appeared in the 1982 World Cup, needed only a tie Sunday to gain a berth for next year's final round from African Group C.

ACE HIGH... Transvaal lock Lukas Swart wins a line-out ball despite the attentions of Namibia's Alex Skinner.

Namibia cuffs Young Lions

HELGE SCHUTZ

Namibia ended the rugby season on a high note when they beat a Transvaal 'Young Lions' team by 30 points to 28 at the National Rugby Stadium on Saturday afternoon.

The home team made fine use of the little possession which came its way and showed great defensive character in the second half when Transvaal was constantly on the attack.

After a penalty apiece by Jaco Coetzee and Transvaal flyhalf Louis Ungerer, Namibia took the lead in the 23rd minute through a fine effort by Michael Marais. He broke through the Transvaal backline, kicked the ball diagonally across to left wing Eden Meyer, and when Transvaal wing Andre Homan couldn't control the bobbing ball, Marais was on hand to dot it down. Coetzee added a fine conversion to give Namibia a 10-3 lead.

Transvaal immediately went on the attack and won several loose-scrams in a row, five metres from Namibia's line, only to be thwarted by Namibia's solid defence. Unable to penetrate the Namibian forwards, Transvaal eventually spun the ball down the backline and centre Porta Hoffmann went over unopposed. Ungerer added the conversion to once again tie the score.

This however stung

Namibia back into action and the following five minutes provided their best display of the match. Centre Henning Snyman kicked towards Transvaal's tryline and when Gerhard Mans, tearing down the rightwing, was tackled without the ball with the tryline gaping, referee Paul Brand had no hesitation in awarding a penalty try. Coetzee's conversion stretched Namibia's lead to 17-10, but more was to come.

Two minutes later Eden Meyer picked up a looseball and broke through Transvaal's backline before sending Stefan Smith away to score behind the posts. Coetzee's conversion gave Namibia a 24-10 lead at halftime.

Transvaal came back in determined fashion and with their forwards dominating proceedings up front, Namibia was forced onto the defensive in the second half.

Ungerer narrowed the gap with two penalties and when scrumhalf Sas Kasselman went over after the Namibian scrum was pushed over its own tryline, with Ungerer adding the conversion, Transvaal were just one point behind the home side.

Coetzee gave Namibia a bit of breathing space when he landed a penalty in the 67th minute but Transvaal's incessant pressure finally paid off five minutes from time.

Transvaal were awarded a tap penalty five metres from the Namibian line and sped the ball wide for replacement wing, Kobus van Deventer to go over. Ungerer's conversion failed, but Transvaal now had a 28-27 lead.

Two minutes later Transvaal prop Johan le Roux was penalised for a head high tackle and Coetzee showed fine composure to land the 40m penalty to give Namibia a 30-28 victory.

Once again Namibia was overshadowed in the forward exchanges and had a very torrid time in the scrums, being pushed back metres on numerous occasions. It didn't go much better in the line-outs, although Alex Skinner and Louis van Coller won a fair share of the ball in the second half.

For all that, Namibia deserves praise for its courageous defence and the commitment and resolve which each member displayed. In defence Johan Barnard once again led the way with a superb performance, while players like Michael Marais, Eden Meyer, Bernard Malgas and Louis van Coller are starting to become stalwarts in the team.

Poor turn-out for triathlon

HELGE SCHUTZ

Mordegai Rossouw won the first Pepsi Mini-triathlon of the season at the Windhoek Municipal pool on Saturday. The event consisted of a 300m swim, a 7,8km cycle and a 2,6km run.

Unfortunately the turn-out for the triathlon was poor. Last year it seemed as if triathlons would really take off in Namibia as more than 100 competitors entered some of the mini-triathlons, but Saturday's one could only attract 17 individuals and 2 teams. Whatever the reasons for the poor turn-out, it is essential that the Namibia Triathlon Federation once again attracts those budding triathletes who turned out in such large numbers last year.

Rossouw completed Saturday's event in 27 minutes and 50 seconds, a fine effort indeed if one bears in mind that the first team home only beat him by 17 seconds.

This team, known as the 'only ones' consisted of three schoolboys, Armin Gretscher, Christian Vaats and Rene Grubert. The second team consisted of well-known triathlete Patrick de Goede who completed the swimming and cycling legs, and his fiancée, Linda de Vos, who did the running leg in a combined time of 32 minutes and 24 seconds.

Conrad Pool was the second man home in 29 minutes and 8 seconds, while Keith Lewins came third in 31 minutes and 7 seconds.

Marika Venter won the woman's section in 37 minutes and 56 seconds, followed by Gillian Brewin, 28 seconds behind.

The next triathlon, the Youth for Christ Pepsi Mini Triathlon takes place on October 23 at Swakopmund.

Americans gamble on football tickets

NEW YORK: Gridiron rules with America's sports fans, but when it comes to the 1994 World Cup, suddenly everyone is a football fan.

With first and second-round matches at every venue virtually sold out, organizers have now unveiled a lottery for tickets for the final three rounds.

Starting Friday, fans in the United States could mail in applications for two seats, no more and no fewer, to each of the eight games in the last three rounds - the quarter-finals, semi-finals, final and match for third place. A random draw from among the applications will decide who gets the tickets.

Aldridge still dubious

REPUBLIC of Ireland striker John Aldridge is doubtful for the vital World Cup qualifier with Spain in Dublin next Wednesday.

The Tranmere forward missed Saturday's English First Division game against Bolton after failing a morning fitness test on a thigh injury, which has now kept him out for three matches. But the former Liverpool targetman was still hopeful.

Krabbe saga continues

A DECISION on the two-year drugs ban facing German sprinter Katrin Krabbe will be made today in Monaco, the German Athletics Federation (DLV) said on Friday.

Krabbe, the former 100m and 200m world sprint champion, was suspended for a year and then banned for a further two years in August after she admitted using the banned substance Clenbuterol.

Free transfer for Mo

EVERTON manager Howard Kendall released Mo Johnston on a free transfer last Friday, after admitting he had made a 1.5-million pound mistake with the Scottish striker.

Kendall moved after no club showed any interest in buying the 30-year-old he had signed from Glasgow Rangers. Capped 38 times for Scotland, he also played for Nantes, Celtic, Watford and Patrick.

Indian opener retires

KRISH Srikanth, the flamboyant Indian opener who thrilled spectators with his unorthodox attacking batting, has announced his retirement from cricket.

Srikanth, 33, appeared in 43 tests and 145 one-day internationals since making his debut against England in 1981-82. He scored 2,061 test and 4,092 one-day runs.

Steven on way back

TREVOR Steven could be making a return to Merseyside with English Premier League giants Liverpool.

Steven, 30, had six seasons with neighbours Everton, but is reputed to be a target of Liverpool manager Graeme Souness. In 1989, Souness, the then Glasgow Rangers' manager, paid Everton 2.25-million dollars for Steven in July 1989.

Walvis Bay and WCE bowled out

HELGE SCHUTZ

Wanderers and Trans Namib recorded victories after the first round of the First National Bank Senior League cricket matches over the weekend.

Walvis Bay travelled to Windhoek to meet Wanderers, but were no opposition for the home team. The coastal side batted first and scored 105 runs in their allotted 50 overs. Their best batsman was the 16 year-old school-boy Gert Young with 24 runs, while Trevor Britten, who took two wickets for seven runs and Andre Smith (two for 17) were Wanderers' best bowlers. Wanderers easily reached the target without the loss of a wicket to win the match by 10 wickets. Etienne Brits scored 57 and Andy Fallis 41.

The match between Trans Namib and the Windhoek College of Education was a closer affair, with Trans Namib eventually winning by 32 runs. Trans Namib batted first and scored 157 runs, with Koos Nel contributing 27, Dudley Corbett 21 and Paul Ludick 20. Werner Jeffreys was Windhoek College's best bowler, taking two wickets for nine runs.

Windhoek College of Education was bowled out for 125 runs with their top scorers being Ashley Griffiths (29 not out) and Clive Griffiths (17), while George Vink took four wickets for 32 runs and Batch Lofty-Eaton three for 25.

Windhoek Lager NFA Cup

FIRING ... Black Africa stopper Seth 'Congo' Thaniseb clears from a storming Nico Hindjou of African Stars during Saturday night's exciting Windhoek Lager NFA Cup quarterfinal second-leg encounter played at the Independence Stadium. Stars lost 0-2.

Resurgent BA too strong for Stars

Civics, Young Ones also qualify...

CONRAD ANGULA

A HIGHLY motivated Black Africa, inspired by a lively homecrowd, appeared too strong for African Stars in the second-leg of the lucrative Windhoek Lager NFA Cup and came out 2-0 winners in a thrilling cup tie played at a well-attended Independence Stadium on Saturday night.

The Lively Lions attacked from the first whistle and never allowed Stars, who started the match with a 3-2 first-leg advantage, any chance to settle down.

The swapping of attacking central defender Michael Claassen into midfield and allrounder Michael Petersen back into defense, put Black Africa clearly on the offensive.

Stars, in contrast, made the mistake of opting for a defensive stance by starting veteran sweeper Nico Hindjou in midfield, a move which allowed Black Africa free passage in the engine-room.

With due respect to Hindjou, the Lively Lions duo of Richard 'Bobby' Samaria and Sylvester 'Lolo' Goraseb appeared too fast for the ailing Stars veteran and created too many holes in the Stars defense.

So it came as no surprise when Black Africa, packing their midfield with five players, netted that much-needed early goal when Claassen rose above Stars defense to head the ball under hapless goalkeeper Collin Usurua in the eighth minute.

It was all that Black Africa needed to clinch the encounter but with the memories of their 3-2 loss after leading 2-0 in the first-leg still fresh in their minds, they continued to attack.

There were excellent build-ups from the back and the midfield, inspired by the tenacious Samaria who never stopped to supply the forwards with scoring chances.

However, over-hasty finishing and sometimes selfishness from strikers Smithley 'Chacklas' Engelbrecht and Donald Tjikune kept the scoreboard low in the first half.

The second half once again belonged to Black Africa but they squandered many opportunities as Engelbrecht and Tjikune continued to miss from pint-point range.

Samaria earned himself a deserved goal when he converted a 78th minute penalty after a teammate was grounded inside the penalty area and referee Scalla

Shaanika accordingly pointed to the spot.

Credit must go to referee Shaanika and his two linesmen who allowed fluency in the match and were never intimidated despite pressure from the crowd.

* In other NFA Cup matches played earlier on Saturday, two clubs from Khomasdal Civics FC and Young Ones also won through to the semi-finals thanks to first-leg victories.

Civics were forced to a goalless draw by the inspired Kraatz Welding Eleven Arrows at the Khomasdal Stadium but the 1-0 away leg victory was enough to take them further into the competition.

Fans at Okahandja were also treated to a goalless stalemate as Young Ones went to Liverpool to defend their 2-1 first-leg victory in Windhoek earlier last month.

However, they were let down by their goal-shy strikers.

Aces got the winner in the 56th minute when Jerry Skosana sent Richard Peer away and his grounder gave Roger de Sano chance.

Three tries for Campese

DAVID Campese scored three second-half tries as the Australian Wallabies breezed to a 43-16 victory over the Canadian National team in a rugby test match on Saturday.

Campese, 30, considered by many to be the best rugby player in the world, was returning to action after a knee injury.

He increased his personal world record for international tries to 57.

Callies down Eagles

D'ALBERTON Callies eased their relegation worries with a comfortable 5-1 win over tail-enders Welkom Eagles at the King's Park soccer stadium in Durban Saturday.

A brace from blond striker Craig Simpson, and a goal each from Zane Moosa, Chippa Molatedi and Cedric Nakhumwa was enough to improve Callies' poor goal difference immensely.
